What are Research Guides?

FSU Libraries research guides, or LibGuides, are one-stop shops for library resources organized by subject, course, or general topic. These guides contain information, resources, and links relevant to research for a specific assignment or topic. Your subject librarian creates and curates each guide and provides the expertise to identify the best resources for your course’s research needs.

Why use them?

Integrate research guides into your Blackboard course site for easy student access.

Organize your guide by week, just like your syllabus, making it simple for students to navigate.

Provide an easy-to-use alternative to the library website. The guides make library research less overwhelming and more focused.

Take advantage of the interactive and adaptable nature of the guides. Librarians modify and update guides as resources and research needs evolve.

Keep in mind:

- You can find your subject librarian under the Research tab on the top of the FSU Libraries home page.
- Your subject librarian will need at least two weeks to create or modify a research guide to tailor the page for a specific assignment or course.
- Any items placed within the guides must meet FSU Libraries’ Policies & Practices, which follow the conditions of copyright law.
